PRIZES ARE THE CURSES OF SCHOOLS

STRIVING TO GET AHEAD OF OTHER PUPILS NOT GOOD

Dr. William McAndrews Superintendent of The Chicago Schools, Tells Teachers That Practice Liberates Unsocial Attitude--Juniors High Rapped--Riegel Says There Should Be a Continuous Check On School Graduates.

colleges with teacher training courses would bring out the faults of the preparatory courses and show where weak points in the teaching could be eliminated.

By noon Tuesday it was estimated that more than 4,000 teachers and school officials were in attendance at the association's meetings.

L. C. Martin, superintendent of Mansfield public schools, was elected to the presidency of the city superintendents' department of the association.

Indications were that the Central Ohio Schoolmasters' club would not take action to join the newly organized Ohio Schoolmasters' club in its state wide fight for more men teachers in the public schools and higher pay as an inducement to men, officers of the local club said, Tuesday.

One of the curses of American education today is the striving of one pupil to get ahead of another for the purpose of winning a prize. Dr. William McAndrews, superintendent of schools of Chicago, Illinois, told the city superintendents' department of the Ohio State Teachers' association in Columbus.

He said that the "unsocial attitudes" liberated by the awarding of prizes for school work counteracted any benefit that might be derived from the striving.

Speaking on "What a Superintendent Had Better Learn About Art," Dr. McAndrews urged the cultivation of artistic appreciation as a part of the school curricula so that "higher kinds of enjoyment may be injected into our social life to counteract the drop in morality."

"School must be a cross section of life," he said. "The old idea was to give children a deferred dividend on their education. As a matter of fact school life should be a part of living itself." He declared that parents want their children to know about arts and artists and that there is a movement toward the development of more appreciation of art.

"The literature which pokes fun at our lack of artistic knowledge is getting under our skins and we are beginning to turn our attention to a cultivation of art," he declared. "What Mencken says irritates us and we find ourselves impelled to get familiar with the higher art of which these modern apostles are preaching."

He urged the development of schools as art centers in communities, with the construction of corridors and galleries for the proper display of good art. Several large American cities are following that plan, he said.

Dr. C. L. Spain, Detroit, Michigan, said that junior high schools in America today are not a true expression of junior high school ideas, "but merely a segregation of seventh, eighth and ninth grades." He said the fallacy in the junior high schools is that there are "few teachers of junior high schools with the philosophy or social viewpoint of pupils of that age." He said the jobs were filled by teachers promoted from elementary grades or assigned from senior high schools, neither of whom are properly equipped for the task.

Dr. Robert F. Boda of Ohio State university declared that it is the duty of an educational system to "prepare men and women to meet crises in life." In view of the constantly changing world, he said it was important that young men and women be prepared "to make the right kind of change, and that they be trained so that they can change when the time comes."

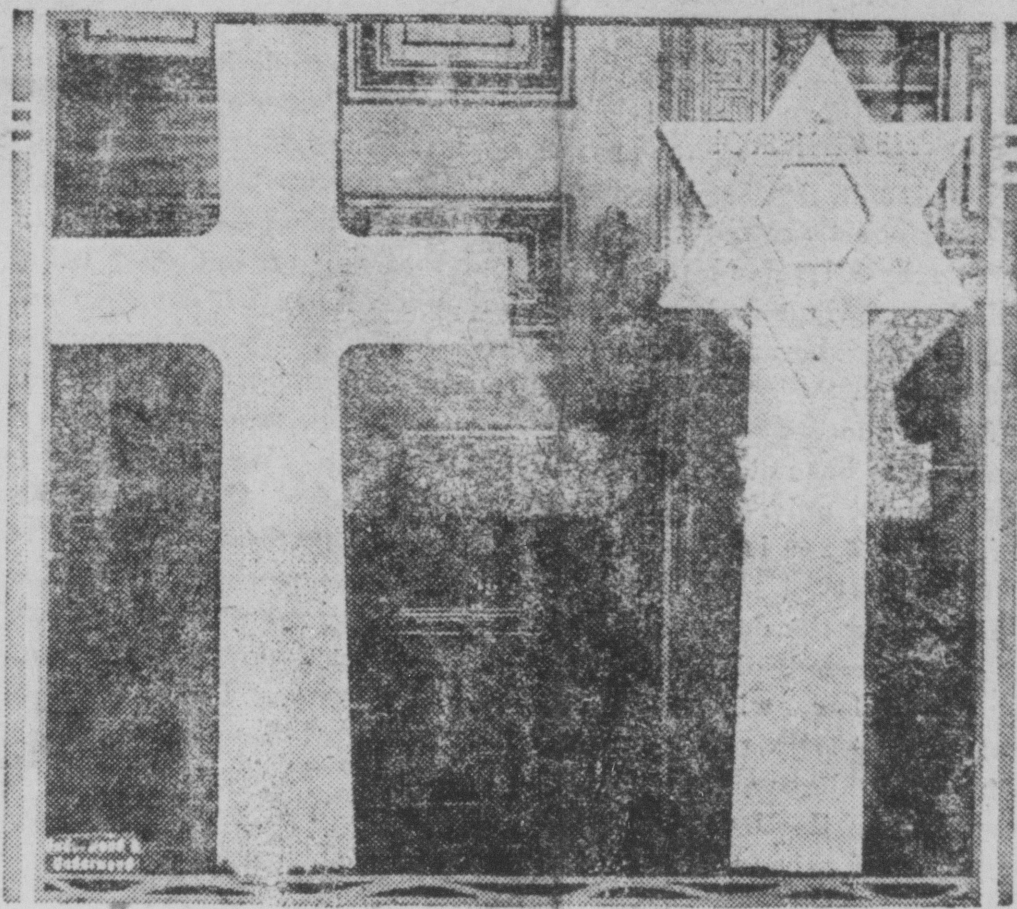

His contention was for the democratic system of society, he said. "In an aristocratic system," he explained, "there must be finality; no fundamental changes are wanted. In a democratic system no fixity is wanted; there is no assignable limit."

Wade E. Miller, principal of Middletown high school, spoke concerning extra curricular activities in high schools.

That Ohio teacher-training institutions begin to make a "check-up" on the results their graduates are securing in the schools was the recommendation made by Vernon M. Riegel, Ohio director of education.

DISTASTEFUL TO COMMITTEE

Campaign May be Waged to Produce More Constructive Plan for The Future.

Columbus, O., Dec. 29 (UP)—The rumor that the Republican state organization would launch an active campaign to nullify the primary election law, materialized today when Chairman Fred W. Warner of the state central committee, issued letters to members of the committee.

In his letters Warner asked the committeemen "to suggest a date for a meeting in order that we may organize a constructive plan of action with a view to holding a primary nominating convention."

The campaign will receive impetus from district organizations if the suggestions in Warner's letters are carried out.

In this connection, Warner urged that district meetings be called and that speakers familiar with political convention clout, outline what the conventions would entail.

"I have received a great many comments from various parts of the state commending the proposed abolition of the primary law," Warner's letters read. "Only a few have suggested that this procedure might be a mistake."

"The general consensus of opinion is that it is a constructive movement conducive to the welfare of the government and the saving of a large amount of expense, together with a great deal of inconvenience to the voting public."

FRANK MASON SOLD STOCK TO THE FASHION

Frank Mason has disposed of his entire stock of dry goods to The Fashion store of Columbus. John J. Ryan, formerly of this city, who is manager of the basement department of the Fashion, is here packing up the stock for shipment to Columbus.

Mr. Mason has been in the dry goods business in this city 29 years and by his fair dealing and strict attention to business became quite a factor in the development of that part of the city's enterprises.

He made many friends who regret his decision to quit the dry goods trade here and who wish him abundant success and prosperity in whatever line he undertakes.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

Taken Direct From the Wires by Correspondents of the United States Press Association.

(United Press)
Columbus—The Ohio acreage seeded to wheat is 1,946,000 acres, or 6 percent less than a year ago, Statistician West of the state federal crop reporting service announced Tuesday.

The decrease, according to West, is due to the failure of farmers to complete seeding in southwestern sections of the state. The failure was caused by continued rainfall, West said.

Columbus—Extradition for the return to Ottawa, Illinois, of James F. Duck, under arrest in Toledo in connection with a $15,000 jewelry store robbery at Ottawa, have been granted by Governor Donahey.

The papers have been sent to Toledo and Ottawa officers were reported enroute to Toledo Tuesday to take charge of Duck.

Cincinnati—B. L. Browning, 35, of Cleveland, employe of the Ferguson Construction company here, was killed Tuesday when a wooden overhead beam snapped and fell upon him.

Youngstown—William Robinson, alias Hunter, wanted in Philadelphia in connection with a murder there in 1923, was under arrest here Tuesday. Robinson has been living here for a year. When officers raided his home they also arrested Minnie Hunter, who was held for investigation. Philadelphia authorities have wired, asking that Robinson be held until they come for him.

Columbus—County boards of education may give financial aid to school districts temporarily bankrupt, if the county commissioners will transfer money to the board, Attorney General Crabbe ruled today.

Crabbe also ruled that teachers and other employes of schools may collect their salaries only by securing judgment when funds are not available.

County boards of education can borrow money to meet expenses of the fiscal year but cannot use the money for the expenses of the preceding year. Crabbe also ruled.

CONDITION OF OHIO FARMING IS IMPROVING

Better and More Standardized Production is The Lesson to be Learned.

Coshocton, O., Dec. 29, (UP).—Farming conditions as a whole are better in Ohio today than they were a year ago, Barry A. Caton, master of the Ohio State Grange, told the United Press today.

Caton pointed out that altho crops in 1925 were large, returns from a large crop are often less than returns from a smaller one, due to fluctuation of prices.

"But at the present time," Caton said, "prices are a little better on the average than a year ago. This is due to the fact that the surplus which for a number of years has kept prices down, has been reduced."

Caton said Ohio farmers must continue to learn the lesson that more production, but better and more standardized production is the need of the farm.

Stories of great agricultural prosperity that have been circulated were not borne out by real facts, Caton declared.

"Agriculture is not yet out of its distress and depression but seemingly it is a step higher than a year ago. The grange believes the years ahead will be brighter," he declared.

MORE DRUNKS, DEATHS IN PROHIBITION YEARS

118 Die of Acute Alcoholism In Cuyahoga County In Past Year; Arrests Mount.

Cleveland, Dec. 28.—There were 118 deaths due to acute alcoholism or poisonous prohibition concoctions in Cuyahoga County during the year, which has three days to go, according to figures made public tonight.

The highest previous year was 1923 with 96. Deaths during the past four years totaled 377.

A record number of arrests were made by Cleveland police for intoxication. The total tonight was 7,870, as compared with 6,613 in 1924. Those not held for court are not included. Arrests by Cleveland police for violation of liquor laws, since prohibition became effective, total 25,682.

Their success in capturing bootleggers has not been so good. They caught only 5,017, as compared with 5,248 last year and 5,701 in 1923.

Discussing the deaths, Coroner A. P. Hammond declared that the Bender law, which provides that persons selling or furnishing intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes and death results, "shall be guilty of second degree murder," might as well not be on the statute books. No person has been convicted under the law in this county and only one prosecution was ever started, he said.

In 1919, the year prohibition went into effect, there were only 495 arrests for intoxication. This is less than during the two preceding years. In 1917 the number of persons held for court for intoxication was 1,209 and the following year the number fell off to 853.

HOUSEHOLD HINTSCheese.

Cheese is solidified milk, and because of its high percentage of protein, lime and phosphorus is extremely good for growing children and young mothers. The cheese makers who produce the tinned cheeses with which you are familiar buy high grade Wisconsin cheese, then blend the cheeses of different ages together, so as to get a standardized product. This method makes it possible for the housewife to buy tinned cheese without asking whether it is young or old, for the cheese-makers have blended the cheese until they have attained the flavor which is the most popular. Then they keep it in air-tight containers.

Raspberry Vinegar.

Take two cans of black or red raspberries. Add one-half pint of cider vinegar, stir and let stand over night. Strain through cheese cloth and add one pound of white sugar. Bring to a boil once, skim and store, in clean, well-corked bottles. Serve as a beverage, using one-third of the raspberry vinegar to two-thirds water.

Giant Salt-Cellar

The Palestine government proposes to erect a plant for the recovery of 80 odd billion tons of salt from the Dead sea—a giant salt-cellar of apparently unlimited capacity—and very soon huge chemical factories and warehouses will be established round the lake, and the peace and quiet of centuries will give place to the ceaseless whirl of wheels.

It is remarkable that one of the most desolate spots in the world should suddenly acquire such tremendous economic importance. Of all the billion tons of salt in the Dead sea, only about ten tons is common salt. The remainder consists of salts of potassium and magnesium, an abundance of which will make Palestine the richest potash country in the world.

In appearance this strange sea challenges the Mediterranean with its clarity and blueness, but so deathly still are its waters that they have earned it its ghoulish name.

POOR CONGRESS!

Always Blamed By the People Says Mr. Longworth.

Whichever way the wind blows, Congress gets the blame. That's the view of the situation as expressed by Nicholas Longworth, the new Speaker of the House of Representatives, in an interview with William Hard printed in Liberty this week. Mr. Longworth has this to say—quoting from the interview:

"I have been a member of the House of Representatives ten terms. That is twenty years. During the whole of that time we have been attacked, denounced, despised, hunted, harried, blamed, looked down upon, excoriated, and flayed.

"I refuse to take it personally. I have looked into history. I find that we did not start being unpopular when I became a Congressman. We were unpopular before that time. We were unpopular even when Lincoln was a Congressman. We were unpopular when John Quincy Adams was a Congressman. We were unpopular even when Henry Clay was a Congressman. We have always been unpopular.

"Our present little task in the House of Representatives is to provide 'leadership' without 'bossism.' We are obediently trying.

"In order to provide 'leadership' we shall have to have 'party loyalty,' and we are going to have it. Will the public be pleased? Shall we be popular or unpopular? History provides the answer to that question. We shall be unpopular."

CARILLON MUSIC OF RARE BEAUTY

Expresses by Melodies True Spirit of Country.

Four hundred years ago Charles V. Roman emperor and (as Charles I) king of Spain, inherited the territory now within the boundaries of Holland and Belgium.

Within this territory a civic music of rare beauty came into being—a music which, while continuing ever since and increasingly holding a place in the love of its people, has been until lately almost unknown outside the boundaries of its origin.

Gradually since the time when Charles V reigned this music has been wonderfully developed. Today it is widely commanding artistic consideration and, with its noble architectural setting, it is coming to be recognized as peculiarly fitted to adorn and stimulate civic and community life everywhere.

The region of which this article treats extends from the North sea shores inward for fifty miles or more in plains which are largely just above high tide.

On every side one sees scores of cities, towns and villages. In the foreground these are clearly defined, but in the middle distance they become less distinct, and on the horizon in soft and misty outline they almost disappear.

In every such extended view, above town hall and city gate and ancient church, rises dominant here a rugged tower, there a tall belfry or a graceful, slender spire. And each of these skyward-soaring structures becomes for the traveler a slinging tower if, on nearer approach, he finds it crowned with that majestic instrument of music called a carillon.

The word "carillon"—pronounced "car-lon," with the "o" as in "atom"—and the derivative, "carillonneur," are French in origin, but now generally accepted in English.

After crossing the Atlantic we touched at Plymouth and at Boulogne, and then on a Friday night came in sight of the shores of the Netherlands. At the mouth of the river Maas (Meuse) we waited for the high tide at two in the morning, to make it possible for our great ship to steam slowly up to Rotterdam.

Here we found the tower of St. Lawrence's church, whose old bells make not merely a great musical instrument, but by their melodies express the spirit of the country over which they sound.

De Amels, the Italian traveler, after climbing the tower of St. Lawrence, said that the indefinable sentiments inspired by the Dutch landscape held him silent for a long time. Then he was startled by strange music coming from he knew not where—the silvery notes now falling slowly one by one, now coming in groups, in trills, in sonorous chords, a quaint dancing strain somewhat primitive, an echo of the ancient life of her people, making one smile and sigh at the same moment.

Mrs. Paul Cromley, of Ashville, was an out of town guest and she was accompanied by two house guests.

ESCAPED INMATE

Of Girls' Reformatory Captured In Michigan Garbed In Boy's Attire.

St. Clair, Mich., Dec. 28.—(UP).—Garbed in masculine attire but carrying a satchel containing feminine prerequisites, Eva Chrysler, 22, who escaped from the girls' reformatory at Marysville, O., last week, was captured here today.

The girl was boarding an interurban for Detroit when Police Chief Arthur Haynes apprehended her. Haynes said the girl came to St. Clair from Marysville to collect money due her from the St. Clair country club.

Miss Chrysler's escape from Marysville was the second since her commitment from Cleveland last summer. She was convicted of stealing clothing valued at $1,000.

The girl was captured near Marysville a short time after her first escape.

TWENTY

Observation Stations To Test Causes of Radio Fading.

Investigation of "fading" on a scale never before attempted in the United States will be made in mid-January at twenty observation stations, it was announced today by J. K. Smith of the Stewart-Warner corporation.

Hitherto such experiments have been carried on in isolated sections of the country between two or at most three stations. The results of such research have been negligible. There is still no explanation of why signals should be stronger in the winter when static electricity leaps out of one's hair or sparks out of the rug at one's feet, and weak in summer when there are apparently no static charges in the things about us, according to Mr. Smith.

Coloring Lobsters

Lobsters may be colored to any hue desired to suit the particular scheme of dinner decoration simply by putting coloring matter in their food, according to a well-known German scientist. He discovered that they turn red after they are boiled because of the action of the heat upon a chemical in their shells.—Popular Mechanics Magazine.

Combination Coat Is Made of Blending Furs

The combination coat, which is half of one and half of a blending fur, is one of the novelties of the season. Incidentally, this mode may be used in fashioning one's last year's jacket into a new, long fur coat for this season's wear.

Buttons, More Buttons to Adorn New Dresses

No longer does the button play only a useful but not ornamental part in the tout ensemble of woman's toilette, for either it is conspicuous by its absence or is present in marshaled ranks in all its decorative possibilities.

With the new type of gown and the kind of lingerie women are wearing at the present time and are apt to continue to wear for a decade, at least, many a maiden or matron steps out to work, to shop, or to pay social calls with not one single button about any part of her apparel.

But when she does wear buttons they extend from the throat to the hem of the dress or are sewed in many little rows like rows of narrow ribbons, sometimes on an otherwise perfectly plain frock.

The tailored coat dresses of this winter will have buttons down the front, down the sides, on the sleeves and nine times out of ten they will be used to button on side flaring flounces at the low hip line.

Even the evening dresses will not escape the decorative button rage and tiny jeweled ones will be used to fasten the drapery on the hip or frankly show on the shoulder seams.

Agree Upon Colors for Autumn Hosiery, Shoes

Cooler colors in hosiery for the autumn are promised by the 12 shades authorized by the Textile Color Card association. A range of colors from moonlight to gunmetal includes fewer of the vivid tints that have been popular with many women. The National Association of Hosiery and Underwear Manufacturers has co-operated with those who compile the color card each season and has prescribed the following: almond, atmosphere, aztec, bran, champagne, French nude, gunmetal, mauve-taupe, moonlight, Piping Rock, rose-gray and rosewood.

Shoes will be made in five attractive shades of brown and a medium gray, described as zinc. In this, two of the largest manufacturing and retailing associations have concurred with the color card producers, so that their style formulae are apt to be rather widely adopted. Autumn blonde is the palest of these tints, while India tan, rosewood, woodland brown, and Rugby tan are shades that are rich but not vivid.

New Autumn Black Frock Is Touched With Colors

The black frock that has been conspicuous by its absence from summer fashions, returns with autumn and from every indication will be even more popular this fall than it has been for several seasons past.

Much of the distinction of these black costumes may be attributed to the beautiful fabrics chosen for their fashioning. Supple crepe-back satins, lustrous velvets, crepes with an almost imperceptible weave are all used and the effects achieved are amazingly smart.

An innovation of the present season is the introduction of touches of a tone of faded pink or old blue into frocks of navy blue or black. This adds a certain youthfulness that is most engaging and contributes greatly to their interest.

Fashionable Colors

All shades of red are featured at the moment, particularly the shades which are of Spanish origin and are known as castilian and toreador. Especially attractive are simple frocks of georgette crepe and crepe de chine in these tones.

Irishman Trained Russians

One of the men employed by Peter the Great in organizing and training the Russian army was Peter Lacy of Limerick, Ireland, who fought in various wars in the service of Russia until retired in 1743.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

Colored Diamonds

Of blue diamonds the most notable are the "Hope" and the "Bismarck." These, by some authorities, are held to be, indeed, the only known specimens of the "true blue diamond." Dark blue diamonds, resembling the sapphire, but displaying the same beautiful play of colors peculiar to the diamond, are handsome gems.

Bandits' Buried "Loot"
Awaits Lucky Finder

About one hundred thousand dollars in gold dust and currency lies buried in a certain Colorado gulch and has been there since 1864. The currency was wrapped in oiled silk and the dust was placed in tin cans. This treasure was interred by Jim and John Reynolds, leaders of a gang of outlaws which terrorized three states during the closing years of the Civil war. By adding murder to highway and stage robbing, they so incensed the citizens of Park county that a posse went forth to exterminate them. It was while in hiding from this posse in Geneva gulch at the junction of Deer and Elk creeks, which flow into the Platte river, that the Reynolds brothers, without informing the other bandits, hid their loot.

The exact spot selected for the cache was an abandoned mine tunnel. A nearby tree was suitably marked, and the brothers fled with their gang. One was killed by the posse, Jim Reynolds and four others were killed in a bunch some weeks later. Finally there was but one left alive, John Reynolds. He was shot while attempting, with Albert Brown, to raid a ranch. Brown carried him to a place of refuge and Reynolds, realizing that he was about to die, told Brown about the buried wealth and how to find it. In addition, he drew a rough map of the locality which has descended through photographed copies to the present day. Having done this, Reynolds being full of bullets, gave up the ghost.

Yet, though men have been searching for this treasure for over half a century, it has not been found. Forest fires have swept the gulch and the old tunnel undoubtedly has caved in, burying within its embrace the loot hidden by Jim and John Reynolds in the brief pause of a flight from a posse.—Josiah M. Ward, in Adventure Magazine.

Rare Gems

Very rare are diamonds of the black and rose-colored varieties. The green diamond is much more common. The "grass-green" variety, however, is scarce, but when it does occur is generally of a brilliancy exceeding that of the emerald. The Museum of Natural History at Paris possesses a collection of green-tinted diamonds that is held to be of the finest, but at the museum in Dresden is to be seen the most perfect specimen of this color.

GOOD MANNERS IN
MOTORING HINTEDCommissioner Stoeckel of
Connecticut Has Prepared Code of Ethics.

Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissioner of motor vehicles of the state of Connecticut, has proposed the following code of ethics or good manners in motoring.

"To be a good driver, in the terms of applied ethics, is to be a person of good manners, truly an altruist, ready to see and appreciate the problems of others, to make proper allowance for them and to exercise even a little more patience, care and consideration than is actually called for by the letter of the law.

"Driving an automobile through water or mud so as to splash same on pedestrians is a common pastime with some motorists who have peculiar ideas of what constitutes a joke.

Give Proper Warning.

"Give proper warning to pedestrians and other users of the highway. Even animals should receive reasonable notice.

"The horn should be reserved for safety purpose; not to signal a person inside of a house nor to attract the attention of people passing.

"Give proper attention to headlights. They often cause inconvenience and danger to others.

"Disobeying the instructions received from traffic officers and trying to steal a few feet of space, instead of remaining in a proper spot, not only annoys pedestrians and other motorists but is a dangerous practice.

"Starting an argument with a traffic officer is not only bad etiquette but is courting trouble with the law.

"Keep in the middle of the road" is a tip that has been construed literally by the roadhog. Drivers of heavy vehicles should keep to the right side of the highway where they belong.

Common Offenses.

"A common offense against road etiquette is committed when a motor car operator places his car at a crossing so as to obstruct pedestrian traffic, thus compelling pedestrians to walk around his machine.

"Drivers who wish to be considerate of other people will concentrate on what they are doing, look where they are going, not attempt to gaze at passersby and stay in line.

"The exercise of kindness to others, consideration and true courtesy will prevent any operator from getting a wrong attitude of mind for driving in traffic. Any operator who loses his temper, who becomes sulky, or is abnormal from any one of many different causes is unfit to drive because his automobile provides a medium of expression for his personality. If that personality is upset, he is bound to make trouble for himself or for others, generally for both."

Driving Car Best Way
to Determine Merits

How should an automobilist judge a car today?

"Get behind it and drive it," is the answer given by a general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car company.

He sums up the reasons for this answer as follows:

"The public is accustomed to judge an automobile too much today by hearsay. Some of these opinions reflect an old judgment on a car and do not reflect the judgment that would be made on the car if the prospective purchaser actually got behind the car today and judged for himself.

"Automobile shows have been developed for just this purpose to keep the public informed as to the developments of each make of car. Each manufacturer makes changes, additions and improvements in his car—some more, some less. The problem is for the automobilist himself to decide for himself just how much "more automobile" each manufacturer is giving to the public each year.

"This can be decided in but one way—ride in the car. After all, how the car rides is the most important thing. Has it a feel of life, of power? Does it accelerate quickly? Is the mechanism easy to handle? Is the car comfortable to ride in? Will it stand the gaff of rough travel?

"It is the only test of a car today. For after all, a motorist's judgment of a car after he has ridden in it is apt to pretty thoroughly reflect the quality of the car."

How to Check Up on Gas
When He Fills the Tank

On pumps making one-gallon delivery see that the pump operator makes a full stroke and that the piston travels its full length.

Keep your eyes on the indicator showing the quality of gas being pumped into your tank.

See that the operator drains the delivery hose properly. Many operators have a trick of creating an airlock in the hose which keeps the gasoline from flowing.

Beware of filling stations, where the delivery is outside and the pump inside the building.

Short delivery is frequently caused by leaks in the supply line to the pump. This condition causes the pump to deliver air instead of gasoline. Listen for sputtering sounds.

If the gasoline is low in the supply tank short delivery is likely to result. This can be detected by the irregular flow of gasoline.

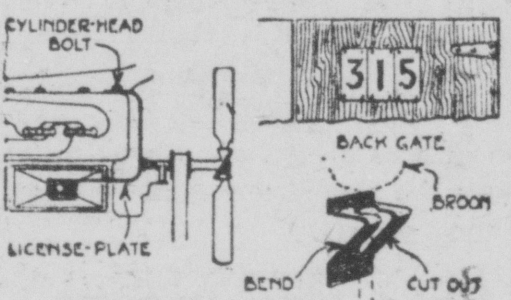

The first delivery by pump after it has been standing idle for some time is invariably short.

View with suspicion a gasoline delivery hose attached to a well in the curb. It is impossible to properly drain such a hose and adequate measure cannot be obtained.

Discover New Uses for the Old License Plates

Automobile license plates that are renewed annually have some usefulness. The enamel on them makes them rust-resisting and for that reason the numbers can be sheared off in strips, rearranged and placed on the rear gates of city homes as house numbers.

One motorist used a number plate as a draft shield by bolting it on the forward side of the intake manifold to prevent the cold draft of the fan from cooling the manifold to the extent of interfering with the carburetion, while another made a holder bracket for the garage broom. Apart from these uses the plates are suitable as patches for holes in the wooden garage floor.

The ingenious motorist will be able to think of many other uses for last year's license plate. The plates are made of pressed steel of a very good quality.

Clutch on Modern Auto
Makes Shifting Easier

One of the most notable advances made by modern cars has been in the direction of easier and more quiet operation. The prevalence of women and even children in their upper teens as drivers of cars is perhaps the best testimonial of the great strides that have been made by automobile engineers along these lines.

Not so many years ago it was necessary to have a good strong arm to crank a car—an ordeal, incidentally, often performed in mud or puddles of water.

Another essential was the possession of a box of matches to light the gas lamps at night. There was also the inconvenience of gear shifting, with the clutch pedal requiring considerable pressure and levers hard to manipulate. In short, driving a car was strictly a man's job.

Electric starters and lights, instrument boards, cord tires and, particularly, easy gear shifting revolutionized things, until today it is not only the usual thing to see a woman at the wheel of a car, but women have become actually as proficient as men in driving automobiles.

Strainer for Cleaning Pail

In cleaning the parts when overhauling the car, the gasoline or kerosene used for the purpose may be of service longer if kept clean. To this end such a strainer or metal grating that will stand up four or six inches in the pail or other receptacle is very advantageous, says Motor Life. When the cleaning liquid is used, sediment is not stirred up, as it strains through into the bottom of the containers. Furthermore, small parts do not get mixed with the sediment and accidentally thrown out.

U. S. FOREST FIRES CAUSE HEAVY LOSS

92,000 Blazes Burn 29,000,000 Acres in Year.

Washington.—Nearly 92,000 forest fires swept 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands during the calendar year 1924, according to a report just compiled by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. The actual money damage was $38,000,000, exclusive of damage to young growth, watershed protection, wild life and recreational facilities.

The figures, say forestry officials, clearly reflect the bad forest fire conditions which prevailed last year, especially in many southern states and in California. Compared with the calendar year 1923, the 1924 figures represent an increase of 24,000 fires, and compared with the nine-year average an increase of 45,000 fires, or nearly 100 per cent. In acreage swept by flames, the 1924 figures are only slightly larger than those for 1923, but are almost double the acreage figures representing the nine-year average.

Money damage in 1924, estimated at $38,000,000, is $10,000,000 above the 1923 estimate, and $18,000,000 higher than the nine-year average of $20,000,000. Damage to young growth, watershed protection, wild life, and recreational facilities, and losses to the lumber industry, including wages and other economic values, are not included.

Was a Bad Year.

William B. Greeley, chief of the forest service, states that the material increase in the number of forest fires reported during 1924 is partly the result of more complete reports, although 1924 was a very bad year in many sections of the country.

"Excessively dry weather was experienced in California and in the Gulf states," said Chief Forester Greeley, "and in these states the 1924 fire figures show great increase over the nine-year average. Smaller increases are also shown in most other states."

An analysis of the 1924 statistics shows that incendiary fires top the list with 21,000, or about 23 per cent of the total. Brush burning comes next with 16,000 fires, or 18 per cent, and fires caused by smokers is third with 13,000, or about 14 per cent. Other chief causes of forest fires in 1924 were railroads, camp fires, lumbering and lightning. Lightning is considered the only natural cause of forest fires. Only six per cent of the 1924 fires were started by lightning. Public Opinion a Needed Weapon. "The greatest single agency with which to combat forest fires," said Colonel Greeley, "is public opinion. No thoughtful citizen can read the 1924 figures without coming to the conclusion that the fight against forest fires is his personal fight. The federal and state governments are doing their utmost with the funds and equipment allotted to them. It is high time that a more effective weapon is placed at their disposal, and that weapon is an outraged public opinion."

The figures given in the forest service report apply to all public and private lands in the United States and not merely to the national forest areas under the jurisdiction of the United States Department of Agriculture. On these latter areas, which embrace 157,000,000 acres, the number of forest fires during 1924 totaled 8,247, the area swept by flames was 602,000 acres and the money damage was estimated at $1,500,000.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

A GIRDLE ROUND THE WORLD

By BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR.

The Golden Rule this year will be stretched out to be a golden girdle around the earth.

American memory keenly recalls how Golden Rule Sunday 'aid hold on the imagination of our own people last December. The plain orphans' dinner was eaten in countless homes, clustering in spirit around the nation's first home, the White House at Washington. And the money response to the Near East Relief was notable also.

But what Americans do not at all realize, is the extent to which the day was observed in Europe. England, Switzerland, France and Germany were especially interested and reacted accordingly to the governing thought of the occasion.

The response this year will be vastly more general in Europe, with about fifty nations cooperating. In the United States popular enthusiasm for the observance grows daily and promises a veritable people's "holy day" of peace spirit and humane sentiment, with immense benevolent value incidentally for the Near East Relief.

The good will among nations cultivated by international charity has been frequently illustrated and vindicated since the great war ended. Famine relief in Russia and Central Europe, enormous subscriptions for China famine and Japanese earthquake—who can measure their influence?

But these considerations chiefly apply to friendliness generated in the hearts of recipients toward the givers of charity. It is to the credit of the Near East Relief, specializing in the care and protection of orphans who survived massacres in Bible Lands, that it has developed a cooperation still more dynamic—the good will that must knit together nations who are cooperating in the same work of kindness, an international partnership in giving for the poor.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

BEST EXPRESSION OF FRIENDSHIP

By CALVIN COOLIDGE

The reports of the observance of International Golden Rule Sunday last year in fifty countries, and its far-reaching results in training orphans in the Near East, have been of great interest to me. This expression of brotherhood inevitably has a beneficial influence upon those who give as well as those who receive.

As practical help is the best expression of friendship, I feel that the aid which America may give out of its prosperity to those impoverished by war may be of the utmost value in the promotion of international good will. The consistent observance of Golden Rule Sunday cannot but help to bring about the application of the Golden Rule to the misunderstandings of nations and individuals.

I earnestly hope that the voluntary observance of this day may become increasingly prevalent in the homes of America and throughout the world.

That rule of ethical guidance which we designate as the Golden Rule is common to all great systems of religion and to the entire philosophy of human relationship.

It is a rule worthy of all acceptance, and to be translated into the terms of relationships among communities and peoples, among races and nations. Those among us who are required to give consideration to the difficult and complicated relations between the great communities of the world; those whose concern is for the maintenance of peace, of mutual helpfulness and generous cooperation among the nations, will do well to keep always in the front of our thoughts this simple precept.

America is ready today, as always, to do its full share. It wants the peace of good will and of the Golden Rule; not the peace of force imposed by those who have power. It does not want peace as an interlude of brightness here and there in a world still addicted to war. It wants peace as the normal, the assured estate in a world from which a wiser generation shall have forever outlawed aggressive war.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

NO WORK MORE WORTHY

By FELIX WARBURG

It has been my great privilege to see something of the Near East Relief work abroad. My outstanding impression has been the efficiency of the Americans who are in charge. Of all the charitable and humanitarian work abroad during and since the war I am sure this is easily the leader in the quality of its personnel. Their own modesty prevents them from saying what they are and from singing their own praises. So I may say for them that they are worthy of being entrusted with our funds.

I have seen in Athens the beauty of the Acropolis and the horrors of the refugee camps. I have seen the Royal Theatre with its horde of refugees. I have seen also the patient workers, who are willing to live in a mud village which 10,000 refugees have built for themselves right in the center of Athens. Mud is the floor, mud is the wall, and muddy are the garments of dwellers in this pathetic refugee town.

To live under these conditions, with sickness and indescribable misery, takes a spirit of devotion that you can find only in the Near East. These Americans who have done this work for us deserve our heartiest applause. You can find their like only in the Near East.

They have stayed at their posts through some desperate times, in Greece, in Syria, in Turkey, in Armenia and Persia. I have seen them in Palestine as well as in Athens and Constantinople, and all I can say is this: Cooperate with them and trust them with all you can.

The work for the orphaned children needs a special word. The children in the American orphanages are thriving in a most extraordinary way. Their training is leading them forward inevitably into a place where they will be the leaders of their people.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Evaline Elizabeth Morris was born near Bremen, Ohio, September 7, 1848, the daughter of Thomas Neeley and Nancy Valentine Neeley.

She was the eldest child of the family of six; one sister, Laura Shumaker and one brother, Ellsworth Baker have preceded her in death. She is survived by three brothers; John Baker, of Cortland, Ohio, and Joseph Baker and Amos Baker, of Lancaster.

On April 5, 1870, she was married to James M. Morris, of Circleville. One son, Ira Walter Morris, was drowned in early youth. Three sons and two daughters survive her; Hattie Ellen Morris, of Toledo; John W. Morris, of Carroll; C. M. Morris, of Miami, Florida; A. R. Morris, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, and Inez L. Fissell, of Columbus.

Mrs. Morris lived for forty-three years on the farm in Bloom township where the family home is still kept. For twelve years she had shared her home with her cousin, Sidney Hilyard who has been her lifelong friend and her constant attendant in the years of her failing strength.

Mrs. Morris had always been known for a kindness of interest in her circle of friends and for a steadfast loyalty to the social, moral and ethical standards of her youth. She came of the stock of the pioneers and was herself one of the sturdiest of the line. She was a member of the United Brethren church from her youth. After establishing the home in Bloom township, she was a member of the Zion Reformed church known as the Betzar church until the organization was dissolved four years ago. She was laid to rest at the Betzar church graveyard beside her husband, James Madison Morris, with whom she lived happily for forty-seven years.

Burglar Was Ladylike

Nettie Gawler, who had the enviable reputation of being the only woman burglar in Kansas City, made burgling quite a profitable business—until she was caught. One night she stole some clothes from the residence of Mrs. Fannie Farr of that city. Some time after the clothes were stolen Mrs. Farr was visiting at the home of her mother when a woman called at the house and tried to sell her some clothing. "This dress will just fit you," she said. "The bust and waist measurements are just right. You are just the proper height to wear them nicely."

"What kind of a dress is it?" inquired Mrs. Farr, all at once becoming interested.

"It's a taffeta silk with a lace collar and insertion of narrow Val—" began the woman, when Mrs. Farr seized her by the arm, interrupting her.

"I'll take it," she said. "Let's go and see it at once."

As the two were going toward the house where the dress was alleged to be stored they met a policeman and Mrs. Farr asked him to arrest her companion. The woman was taken into custody, the house was searched and the stolen goods were recovered.

Family of Naval Heroes

It is a sixteen-year-old naval cadet who has just succeeded to the baronetcy of his father, Admiral Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, who in the great war commanded the battleship Centurion at Jutland, afterward directed as rear admiral of the British forces in the Black sea, helping the Russian empress mother and the members of her family to escape from the Crimea, and who from 1923 to 1924 was commander in chief of the British naval forces in north Atlantic and west Indian waters.

That young Sir Michael Culme-Seymour should belong to the naval profession is in keeping with the traditions of his ancient family and serves to recall the fact that the name of Seymour has figured without a single break on the roster of the officers of the British fleet ever since the reign of Henry VIII, that is to say, prior to the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. Sir Thomas Seymour was the lord high admiral of the blue-beard monarch. And another Seymour was the vice admiral of that fleet which defeated the Spanish armada.—Family Herald.

Finding New Power

Although their progress is slow and unspectacular, scientists are making dogged attempts to discover a way to make artificial fuels which will replace the diminishing supplies of coal and oil. The process they seek to perform in their laboratories, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, is the marvelous one that nature uses every day in storing up energy in leaves and plants by converting waste material into wood, etc., under the action of sunlight. Solution of the riddle is being sought in California by Dr. Herman A. Spoehr and a staff of research workers. A year's consumption of coal at the present time represents the accumulation of 100 years, he says.

Turin's Auto Trade

Turin, the Detroit of Italy's automobile world, sends nearly three-fourths of its cars to other countries.

AMUSEMENTS

Comedy and laughter reign supreme at the Metropolitan theater for James Cruze's latest Paramount production, "Marry Me!" is being shown at that theater to appreciative audiences.

"Marry Me!" is a comedy pure and simple. It was created for entertainment purposes only. And since heart interest is the basis of all good comedy, Cruze has with profound understanding and skill injected into it all those intimately human touches that lift the picture out of the make-believe into the real!

Originality in movie plots is rather rare and for that reason alone this photoplay deserves a blue ribbon award. Imagine a pretty small town school teacher waiting five years for her fiancé, John Smith. Picture her excitement when she receives a telegram one day saying that he is coming. And then consider her humiliation and embarrassment when John Smith arrives, not with a wedding ring but with a cold storage egg! Of course, it's another John Smith—and that's where the fun begins!

Cruze is in a class by himself when it comes to extracting the maximum in "Marry Me!" he hasn't overlooked a single opportunity. The motif and characters get right under your skin, and you worry with them and exult with them as the humor and pathos is projected on the screen.

As in all Cruze productions, the acting is everything that it should be. Florence Vidor is perfectly cast as the sweet, appealing heroine; Edward Everett Horton gives a decidedly convincing performance as the pure food crusader; and Helen Jerome Eddy and John Roche are admirably effective in their respective roles.

"Marry Me!" is the type of cheerful entertainment that is good for anything that ails you!

JUDGES ARE BLAMED FOR CRIME WAVE

Daily Interview With Big Men—
Today's Interview With John
Barton Payne, President
of American Red Cross.

(U. P. C. News Service Inc.)

"Our criminal law is all right. It is quite capable of dealing with the criminals. There are of course minor defects here and there, but basically the system is sound. But there is much difference between law and law enforcement. We need commanding personalities on the bench and competent juries in the box. If our judges were able, fearless, intelligent as well as just and considerate, there would be very little discussion of changing the laws.

"If our criminal law is to be criticized it is on the ground of lack of expedition of trial. The shorter the time between arrest and trial the more effectively the criminal is deterred from crime. A judge with a commanding personality can put the machinery of justice on a higher plane. He can cut off long winded speeches and reduce reliance on technical delays. Prolonged trials give the law a bad reputation and cause people to believe that there is something wrong with the law when in fact the fault is with those who administer it.

"Our theory that all men are innocent until proved guilty is worked to such an extreme by weak, sympathetic or incompetent judges that chances of conviction have grown relatively small. We are too sentimental. Our sentimentality is not only defeating justice but is definitely encouraging the criminal. Our prisons are effected by this sentimentality. A distinction must be made between those who commit crimes under the dominion of passion and the professional criminal. The latter constitute a class at war with society. The cases where they are reformed are extremely rare. They should accordingly be treated as criminals and not as pampered guests of the state."

JUSTICE IN ENGLAND

In England the rights of a citizen are scrupulously respected. Such conduct as that of some American police officials and judges, who at their own whim violate the constitutional rights of individuals, would raise a hurricane of protest in England.

The other day there was an illuminating example of British justice. An ex-convict named Trevor was wanted for a few petty swindles. Another citizen was arrested on suspicion that he was Trevor. He was held overnight in a police station without being allowed to call a lawyer.

This case raised a storm. The blood of the British public boiled at the indignity. The newspapers thundered. The British office of home affairs, a cabinet department, began an inquiry to fix the blame and impose punishment. Only one citizen had been injured, but he was the symbol of the British nation. There was more honest indignation in his behalf than there is here in behalf of an American citizen murdered in his home.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Japanese Like Films

That the Japanese are as enthusiastic about moving pictures and movie stars as are the film fans in America was recently evidenced by a prize contest for the most popular Japanese cinema player. The contest was conducted by the Miyako Shimbun of Tokyo, one of the leading amusement newspapers of the capital, and the winner, Miss Nobuko Satsuki, received 1,313,553 votes. Both male and female players were eligible. Miss Satsuki is noted for her "vamp" roles.

Wintering Calf on Grain Too Costly

Gains Do Not Justify the Additional Expense.

In wintering calves the use of grain in the ration increases the cost of wintering materially and does not sufficiently increase the total gains at the time or subsequently to justify the additional expense, says the United States Department of Agriculture. This conclusion was reached from the results of a series of experiments carried on by the department in co-operation with the West Virginia experiment station in which grade Short-horn, Hereford, and Aberdeen calves were used to determine the effect of different winter rations on gains the following summer.

One lot of calves receiving a ration of mixed hay and a grain mixture of 3 parts corn, 1 part bran, and 1 part linseed meal made a winter gain of 98 pounds each, which was more than twice as much as another lot which was fed corn silage and clover hay. The latter drove, however, made a greater gain the following summer on pasture and lacked only 42 pounds of reaching the same total as the grain-fed calves. The cost of the grain ration through the winter did not justify the extra gains, says the department.

In fact, the experiment was carried until the calves were three years old, in which time the advantage in weight due to grain feeding the first winter was practically all lost by the time they were three years old.

Soiling Crops or Corn Silage as Supplements

Soiling crops or corn silage are recommended as supplements for drought damaged pastures used for dairy herds. If the dairyman lacks corn silage and is not in position to feed a soiling crop, he should give his cow a grain ration, says O. G. Schaefer of the dairy division, University farm, St. Paul, Minn. For average or low producing cows on pastures badly burned the grain ration should consist of equal parts of corn and oats or equal parts of barley and oats. For cows of more than average production one pound of oil meal should be added to the ration for every five or six pounds of the corn and oats or barley and oats. Where no pasture is left at all the cows should be fed about as in winter.

Save Farm Machinery by Covering and Painting

Now is the time of year to get all the farm machinery under cover and painted.

If the metal is covered with paint, it will not rust. Rust destroys thousands of dollars' worth of farm machinery each year. Not even a wealthy farmer can afford to neglect his machines.

Grease and rust that has accumulated should first be removed. The rust may be removed by means of sandpaper, or a strong steel brush. Grease may be removed with soft, warm water.

A coat of paint over anything is the same as a covering, and protects what it covers from the elements. It is economy to paint.

Keep Late Spring Pigs on Good Growing Ration

Late spring pig litters should be kept on a good growing ration well supplied with either skim milk or tankage. If there is any indication of cheaper corn this fall these late spring pigs might be carried along for growth on a limited corn and tankage ration while on good pasture. Until good pasture does arrive a liberal supply of tankage or skim milk and grain should be provided.

Little is gained by keeping a pig down to half efficiency by a limited ration. Young pigs become stunted on pasture alone. At least two pounds of grain daily on good pasture for 100 pounds of live weight are required for best results.

FARM NOTES

Early plowed kafir stubble makes good oat ground.

Clean hens in clean quarters make for poultry profits.

Fifty ears of corn should be gathered for every acre to be planted next year.

Poison bran mash is an indispensable item on the last banquet menu for grasshoppers.

Corn selected for seed should be stored at once in a dry, well-ventilated place where it will cure quickly and remain dry.

Roughly, soy straw may be regarded as about two-thirds as valuable as clover hay, but this is not an exact figure by any means.

Legumes take from 50 to 100 pounds of nitrogen to the acre from the air annually. An amount sufficient for a 50-bushel corn crop. Seed some alfalfa this fall.

Oats is a good grain to feed colts, but when not available a grain ration consisting of six parts corn, three parts bran, and one part linseed oil meal, is a splendid substitute.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY WOMEN

Forenast Long Skirts Campaign Started In Capital City.

Washington, Dec. 28.—(UP.)—The young debs of the capital flipped their cigarette ashes disdainfully today at the social campaign undertaken here for return of long skirts and dainty non-smoking, covered-knee women of Victorian days.

Their eye brows arched in cool surprise as Mrs. John B. Henderson, social arbiter of embassy row, with the backing of the blue blooded daughters of the American Revolution, the National Congress of parents and teachers and the national federation of women's clubs, led the assault upon knee length gowns and cigarettes—which have been accepted here longer than anywhere else in the nation as established institutions.

Miss Elizabeth Hume, debutante, said the campaign was "bunk."

"Smoking is the least of the vulgarities of the present day," she said.

Miss Anne Graham, another bud commented:

"If American womanhood did nothing worse than smoke and wear short dresses life would be perfect."

Most of the debutantes said they smoked and several criticized severely the fashions of fifty years ago, as unhealthy, clumsy and troublesome.

Mrs. Henderson assailed short gowns as a "vulgar imitation of the Paris underworld" and cigarettes smoked by women as "inevitably leading sooner or later to physical bankruptcy and race degeneracy."

STATE TEACHERS'

Association Re-elects President McDowell.

Columbus, Dec. 29.—(UP.)—J. A. McDowell, superintendent of schools in Ashland, O., was re-elected president of the Ohio State Teachers' Association, in convention here today. McDowell, who has held his present position for 18 years and has served two terms as a member of congress, was unopposed for election.

The long-heralded fight for "more men teachers" and "to make the teaching profession more attractive to men," was launched here today as steps were taken to organize the Ohio Schoolmasters' Club.

Untrained Monkey That Shows Good Manners

What is a monkey really like? That is, when he is brought up without any training of furbelows whatever, when he is left entirely uninfluenced to follow his own sweet way and is not even given monkey companions from which he can learn, what is proper for monkeys to do? That is the question Professor Pfungst, a member of the Berlin Physiological society, wanted to get some light on in a study he made on a monkey brought up just like that.

As an infant, the monkey was raised on human milk with some mixture of cow's milk, for the monkey brand was unavailable. His face was so light at birth that it was easy to mistake him for a human infant when in his nurse's arms. On the third day of his adopted life he began to suck his thumb and has not gotten over the habit yet in his fourth year of life. Thumb-sucking has never been observed in other monkeys, Professor Pfungst says.

The little fellow knew good manners from birth. He could not bear being shouted at and he always turned his head and ignored the offender. It was just as bad when anyone stared at him; in fact, sometimes he was so upset by it that he showed he would rather be dead than go through with it, for he often lay flat on the ground and pretended he was. Anything that resembled big scary eyes frightened him. The sight of a man's head did not alarm him in the least, but a gorilla's head aroused great fear.

The monkey -ed, not when he was bored or tired, but when he was angry. He was serious and never laughed, although his mother before him had. He could not cry, and even on long held before his eyes failed to evoke tears.

In four years he had seen practically no other creatures except man. On two occasions he had been shown a cat, and then himself in a looking-glass. Then came his introduction to one of his own kind. At first he was very excited and afraid, but his courage eventually returned, and before long he became trustful.

CITIES OF FUTURE TO BE BIG TRADE CENTERS

People Will Live in Widely Scattered Suburbs.

Chicago.—Cities of the future will be made up of a central area, devoted to business and night life, and widely scattered suburbs in which all the married people will live.

That is the conclusion of D. R. McKenzie, exchange professor of sociology from the University of Washington to the University of Chicago.

In outlining his study of ecology, or the forces that distribute population, Professor McKenzie asserted it's all a question of transportation.

"The first type of city," he added, "demanded that its inhabitants walk to the center for business and the pursuit of pleasure. That type tended to be circular and family life was distributed in all parts. Then, with the rudimentary street car lines, came the star-shaped city.

"As industry developed and cross transportation lines came into being, there also developed clusters of city life, with a new center at each crossing. Gradually subways and elevated lines brought a network of urban life scattered all over the city."

"With autos," he said, "the population may live anywhere within fifty or seventy-five miles from the downtown, highly specialized shopping area."

Professor McKenzie added that it was possible to predict, with fair accuracy, how long a slum will remain a slum and to what extent the gold coasts of today will remain fashionable.

Slants on Life

Contrasting Contacts

TRADITION advises that a scarcity of men may always be expected at summer hotels. And feminine experience must verify tradition, for who does not know that women at leisure find flirtation a vocation?

But wherever men are lacking and women are idle and must fall back upon their sex, they are impelled to form friendships with one another, or at least to get together in association that passes for friendship. And sometimes friendships formed by women in strange places survive social and other differences that would be fatal at home.

At the Hotel Delmar the breakfast hour on a certain sultry morning disclosed some twosome women with but three or four men. Some of the women were dressed for tennis, others for golf, several for other outdoor exercise, and but few had that purposeless aspect that sheer laziness gives.

One very pretty young woman, upon whom the eyes of others in her vicinity turned with admiration or envy, according to the ages of the gazers, for her sartorial style supplemented nature's endowment, was oblivious to all about her. As she daintily negotiated her breakfast she apparently found joy in a letter which she read and read again. And as she rose from the table she held the letter open as though it had not exhausted her interest, strolled out upon a piazza and settled comfortably in a chair.

Another woman, older but still attractive and elegant in dress, had regarded the young woman with a peculiar interest, and, following her, took a chair near enough to indulge her impulse to become acquainted.

They fell into conversation without knowing anything whatever of each other. But in such circumstances names mean nothing, and formality is ignored.

"I suppose you are alone, as I am," said the elder woman with a smile.

"For the moment, yes. I expect some one this afternoon."

"I had hoped," said the elder with a sigh, "that we might get acquainted."

"I Suppose You Are Alone, as I am?"

and perhaps be companionable. I know no one here, and one so seldom finds congeniality!"

"We can be friends just the same," said the younger. "The one I expect is to remain but a day or so. He will return later. I am to be married soon," she added, blushing.

"Ah! It is strange I am so impressed by you! And as you have confided a secret—I suppose it is a secret—I shall tell you something of myself." They drew their chairs closer. "I am here to forget—or try to forget—an unhappy episode in my life."

"I suppose we must all have unhappiness some time. Fortunately I have escaped it, and shall not anticipate it."

"There may be persons who never know it. I hope it may pass you by."

"You are still young, and I think you are of a buoyant spirit," said the younger woman with an approving glance. "What episode in life can prevail over the will to seek happiness?"

"True as to some things. But with the affections and a life that has seemed settled yet is broken it is different."

"You have been disappointed in love?" The tone was one of pity.

"Yes. Or in marriage. Sometimes it means the same thing. Sometimes love and marriage have no intimate relation. You feel for me. That proves you are in love."

"Ah!" The younger woman's expression was an eloquent affirmative.

"Then listen. When you are married, cherish the love of the man who loves you. Never be careless of it. Some women do not realize upon their opportunities. I may have been careless. I may have thought that what seemed settled would never be disturbed. My husband drifted away from me. I may have assumed too much. But I could not stand rivalry. I divorced him, and he never moved to defend himself. Surely that was a confession!"

The younger woman was disturbed, but her will to friendship was not affected. She took the other's hand. "No woman who loves a man can excuse rivalry," she said. "Then she gave a little cry, and rose. 'He has come on an earlier train, as I felt sure he would.' And with a happy flutter she started to meet a well-groomed man of about forty who with quick, nervous steps entered the piazza with a searching glance."

The smile as he approached left him when he recognized the elder woman, who crumpled in her chair in a faint.

PRIZES ARE THE CURSES OF SCHOOLS

STRIVING TO GET AHEAD OF OTHER PUPILS NOT GOOD

Dr. William McAndrews Superintendent of The Chicago Schools, Tells Teachers That Practice Liberates Unsocial Attitude--Juniors High Rapped--Riegel Says There Should Be a Continuous Check On School Graduates.

One of the curses of American education today is the striving of one pupil to get ahead of another for the purpose of winning a prize. Dr. William McAndrews, superintendent of schools of Chicago, Illinois, told the city superintendents' department of the Ohio State Teachers' association in Columbus.

He said that the "unsocial attitudes" liberated by the awarding of prizes for school work counteracted any benefit that might be derived from the striving.

Speaking on "What a Superintendent Had Better Learn About Art," Dr. McAndrews urged the cultivation of artistic appreciation as a part of the school curricula so that "higher kinds of enjoyment may be injected into our social life to counteract the drop in morality."

"School must be a cross section of life," he said. "The old idea was to give children a deferred dividend on their education. As a matter of fact school life should be a part of living itself." He declared that parents want their children to know about arts and artists and that there is a movement toward the development of more appreciation of art.

"The literature which pokes fun at our lack of artistic knowledge is getting under our skins and we are beginning to turn our attention to a cultivation of art," he declared. "What Mencken says irritates us and we find ourselves impelled to get familiar with the higher art of which these modern apostles are preaching."

He urged the development of schools as art centers in communities, with the construction of corridors and galleries for the properly display of good art. Several large American cities are following that plan, he said.

Dr. C. L. Spain, Detroit, Michigan, said that junior high schools in America today are not a true expression of junior high school ideas, "but merely a segregation of seventh, eighth and ninth grades." He said the fallacy in the junior high schools is that there are "few teachers of junior high schools with the philosophy or social viewpoint of pupils of that age." He said the jobs were filled by teachers promoted from elementary grades or assigned from senior high schools, neither of whom are properly equipped for the task.

Dr. Robert F. Boda of Ohio State university declared that it is the duty of an educational system to "prepare men and women to meet crises in life." In view of the constantly changing world, he said it was important that young men and women be prepared "to make the right kind of change, and that they be trained so that they can change when the time comes."

His contention was for the democratic system of society, he said. "In an aristocratic system," he explained, "there must be finality; no fundamental changes are wanted. In a democratic system no fixity is wanted; there is no assignable limit."

Wade E. Miller, principal of Middletown high school, spoke concerning extra curricular activities in high schools.

That Ohio teacher-training institutions begin to make a "check-up" on the results their graduates are securing in the schools was the recommendation made by Vernon M. Riegel, Ohio director of education.

Inspection by normal schools and colleges with teacher training courses would bring out the faults of the preparatory courses and show where weak points in the teaching could be eliminated.

By noon Tuesday it was estimated that more than 4,000 teachers and school officials were in attendance at the association's meetings.

L. C. Martin, superintendent of Mansfield public schools, was elected to the presidency of the city superintendents' department of the association.

Indications were that the Central Ohio Schoolmasters' club would not take action to join the newly organized Ohio Schoolmasters' club in its state wide fight for more men teachers in the public schools and higher pay as an inducement to men, officers of the local club said, Tuesday.

HAPPENINGS IN OUR STATE

(United Press)
Columbus--The Ohio acreage seeded to wheat is 1,946,000 acres, or 6 percent less than a year ago, Statistician West of the state federal crop reporting service announced Tuesday.

The decrease, according to West, is due to the failure of farmers to complete seeding in southwestern sections of the state. The failure was caused by continued rainfall, West said.

Columbus--Extradition for the return to Ottawa, Illinois, of James F. Duck, under arrest in Toledo in connection with a $15,000 jewelry store robbery at Ottawa, have been granted by Governor Donahey.

The papers have been sent to Toledo and Ottawa officers were reported enroute to Toledo Tuesday to take charge of Duck.

Cincinnati--B. L. Browning, 35, of Cleveland, employe of the Ferguson Construction company here, was killed Tuesday when a wooden overhead beam snapped and fell upon him.

Youngstown--William Robinson, alias Hunter, wanted in Philadelphia in connection with a murder there in 1923, was under arrest here Tuesday. Robinson has been living here for a year. When officers raided his home they also arrested Minnie Hunter, who was held for investigation. Philadelphia authorities have wired, asking that Robinson be held until they come for him.

Columbus--County boards of education may give financial aid to school districts temporarily bankrupt, if the county commissioners will transfer money to the board, Attorney General Crabbe ruled today.

Crabbe also ruled that teachers and other employes of schools may collect their salaries only by securing judgment when funds are not available.

County boards of education can borrow money to meet expenses of the fiscal year but cannot use the money for the expenses of the preceding year. Crabbe also ruled.

CONDITION OF OHIO FARMING IS IMPROVING

Better and More Standardized Production is The Lesson to be Learned.

Coshocton, O., Dec. 29, (UP).--Farming conditions as a whole are better in Ohio today than they were a year ago, Barry A. Caton, master of the Ohio State Grange, told the United Press today.

Caton pointed out that altho crops in 1925 were large, returns from a large crop are often less than returns from a smaller one, due to fluctuation of prices.

"But at the present time," Caton said, "prices are a little better on the average than a year ago. This is due to the fact that the surplus which for a number of years has kept prices down, has been reduced."

Caton said Ohio farmers must continue to learn the lesson that not more production, but better and more standardized production is the need of the farm.

Stories of great agricultural prosperity that have been circulated were not borne out by real facts, Caton declared.

"Agriculture is not yet out of its distress and depression but seemingly it is a step higher than a year ago. The grange believes the years ahead will be brighter," he declared.

DISTASTEFUL TO COMMITTEE

Campaign May be Waged to Produce More Constructive Plan for The Future.

Columbus, O., Dec. 29 (UP).--The rumor that the Republican state organization would launch an active campaign to nullify the primary election law, materialized today when Chairman Fred W. Warner of the state central committee, issued letters to members of the committee.

In his letters Warner asked the committeemen "to suggest a date for a meeting in order that we may organize a constructive plan of action with a view to holding a primary nominating convention."

The campaign will receive impetus from district organizations if the suggestions in Warner's letters are carried out.

In this connection, Warner urged that district meetings be called and that speakers familiar with political convention clout, outline what the conventions would entail.

"I have received a great many comments from various parts of the state commending the proposed abolition of the primary law," Warner's letters read. "Only a few have suggested that this procedure might be a mistake."

"The general consensus of opinion is that it is a constructive movement conducive to the welfare of the government and the saving of a large amount of expense, together with a great deal of inconvenience to the voting public."

MORE DRUNKS, DEATHS IN PROHIBITION YEARS

118 Die of Acute Alcoholism In Cuyahoga County In Past Year; Arrests Mount.

Cleveland, Dec. 28.—There were 118 deaths due to acute alcoholism or poisonous prohibition concoctions in Cuyahoga County during the year, which has three days to go, according to figures made public tonight.

The highest previous year was 1923 with 96. Deaths during the past four years totaled 377.

A record number of arrests were made by Cleveland police for intoxication. The total tonight was 7,870, as compared with 6,613 in 1924. Those not held for court are not included. Arrests by Cleveland police for violation of liquor laws, since prohibition became effective, total 25,682.

Their success in capturing bootleggers has not been so good. They caught only 5,017, as compared with 5,248 last year and 5,701 in 1923.

Discussing the deaths, Coroner A. P. Hammond declared that the Bender law, which provides that persons selling or furnishing intoxicating liquor for beverage purposes and death results, "shall be guilty of second degree murder," might as well not be on the statute books. No person has been convicted under the law in this county and only one prosecution was ever started, he said.

In 1919, the year prohibition went into effect, there were only 495 arrests for intoxication. This is less than during the two preceding years. In 1917 the number of persons held for court for intoxication was 1,209 and the following year the number fell off to 853.

HOUSEHOLD HINTSCheese.

Cheese is solidified milk, and because of its high percentage of protein, lime and phosphorus is extremely good for growing children and young mothers. The cheese makers who produce the tinned cheeses with which you are familiar buy high grade Wisconsin cheese, then blend the cheeses of different ages together, so as to get a standardized product. This method makes it possible for the housewife to buy tinned cheese without asking whether it is young or old, for the cheese-makers have blended the cheese until they have attained the flavor which is the most popular. Then they keep it in air-tight containers.

Raspberry Vinegar.

Take two cans of black or red raspberries. Add one-half pint of cider vinegar, stir and let stand over night. Strain through cheese cloth and add one pound of white sugar. Bring to a boil once, skim and store, in clean, well-corked bottles. Serve as a beverage, using one-third of the raspberry vinegar to two-thirds water.

Giant Salt-Cellar

The Palestine government proposes to erect a plant for the recovery of 80 odd billion tons of salt from the Dead sea—a giant salt-cellar of apparently unlimited capacity—and very soon huge chemical factories and warehouses will be established round the lake, and the peace and quiet of centuries will give place to the ceaseless whirl of wheels.

It is remarkable that one of the most desolate spots in the world should suddenly acquire such tremendous economic importance. Of all the billion tons of salt in the Dead sea, only about ten tons is common salt. The remainder consists of salts of potassium and magnesium, an abundance of which will make Palestine the richest potash country in the world.

In appearance this strange sea challenges the Mediterranean with its clarity and blueness, but so deathly still are its waters that they have earned it its greswome name.

POOR CONGRESS!

Always Blamed By the People Says Mr. Longworth.

Whichever way the wind blows, Congress gets the blame. That's the view of the situation as expressed by Nicholas Longworth, the new Speaker of the House of Representatives, in an interview with William Hard printed in Liberty this week. Mr. Longworth has this to say—quoting from the interview:

"I have been a member of the House of Representatives ten terms. That is twenty years. During the whole of that time we have been attacked, denounced, despised, hunted, harried, blamed, looked down upon, excoriated, and flayed.

"I refuse to take it personally. I have looked into history. I find that we did not start being unpopular when I became a Congressman. We were unpopular before that time. We were unpopular even when Lincoln was a Congressman. We were unpopular when John Quincy Adams was a Congressman. We were unpopular even when Henry Clay was a Congressman. We have always been unpopular.

"Our present little task in the House of Representatives is to provide 'leadership' without 'bossism.' We are obediently trying.

"In order to provide 'leadership' we shall have to have 'party loyalty,' and we are going to have it. Will the public be pleased? Shall we be popular or unpopular? History provides the answer to that question. We shall be unpopular."

CARILLON MUSIC OF RARE BEAUTY

Expresses by Melodies True Spirit of Country.

Four hundred years ago Charles V. Roman emperor and (as Charles I) king of Spain, inherited the territory now within the boundaries of Holland and Belgium.

Within this territory a civic music of rare beauty came into being—a music which, while continuing ever since and increasingly holding a place in the love of its people, has been until lately almost unknown outside the boundaries of its origin.

Gradually since the time when Charles V reigned this music has been wonderfully developed. Today it is widely commanding artistic consideration and, with its noble architectural setting, it is coming to be recognized as peculiarly fitted to adorn and stimulate civic and community life everywhere.

The region of which this article treats extends from the North sea shores inward for fifty miles or more in plains which are largely just above high tide.

On every side one sees scores of cities, towns and villages. In the foreground these are clearly defined, but in the middle distance they become less distinct, and on the horizon in soft and misty outline they almost disappear.

In every such extended view, above town hall and city gate and ancient church, rises dominant here a rugged tower, there a tall belfry or a graceful, slender spire. And each of these skyward-soaring structures becomes for the traveler a singing tower. If, on nearer approach, he finds it crowned with that majestic instrument of music called a carillon.

The word "carillon"—pronounced "car-lion," with the "o" as in "atom"—and the derivative, "carillonneur," are French in origin, but now generally accepted in English.

After crossing the Atlantic we touched at Plymouth and at Boulogne, and then on a Friday night came in sight of the shores of the Netherlands. At the mouth of the river Maas (Meuse) we waited for the high tide at two in the morning, to make it possible for our great ship to steam slowly up to Rotterdam.

Here we found the tower of St. Lawrence's church, whose old bells make not merely a great musical instrument, but by their melodies express the spirit of the country over which they sound.

De Amleis, the Italian traveler, after climbing the tower of St. Lawrence, said that the indefinable sentiments inspired by the Dutch landscape held him silent for a long time. Then he was startled by strange music coming from he knew not where—the silvery notes now falling slowly one by one, now coming in groups, in trills, in sonorous chords, a quaint dancing strain somewhat primitive, an echo of the ancient life of her people, making one smile and sigh at the same moment.

Mr. and Mrs. Harley Bowen entertained Saturday evening in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Kinser, of Genoa, Ohio. Thirty guests, friends and acquaintances of Mr. and Mrs. Kinser, enjoyed the hospitality of Mr. and Mrs. Bowen until a late hour. Music and dancing were the diversions of the evening. A delicious salad course was served by the hostess.

At a very pretty dinner bridge at the residence of her aunt, Mrs. F. A. Lynch in South Court street last evening, Miss Alice Phillips was hostess. The guests found their places at seven tables where the delicious dinner was served. At the conclusion of the dinner the fascinating game of bridge was played and when the scores were counted prizes were awarded Misses Mary Alice Bales and Hazel Palm.

A number of girls home from college were in attendance at this party, among them being Miss Bales, from Ward-Belmont, Nashville, Tenn.; Miss Margaret Weldon, Mt. Holyoke, South Hadley, Mass.; Miss Evangeline Smith, Nazareth College, Louisville, Ky.; Miss Martha Wilder, Ohio State University, Columbus, and Miss Rose Smith, Sacred Heart College, Cincinnati.

Mrs. Paul Cromley, of Ashville, was an out of town guest and she was accompanied by two house guests.

The time is passed when the measure of the value of a memorial is quantity. I hope the time has come when that measure is quality. I care not whether the material be marble or granite, its future will be measured by the character of the design. It is quality that has preserved for us the finest examples in painting and sculpture. It is quality that will stamp our imprint upon cemeteries of the future. Simplicity, correct lines and proportions and proper ornamentation are the real fundamentals. A design that is right, material that is lasting and perfect workmanship, spells success for the future of this industry and the beautification of the cemetery. Will you let me help you select the memorial for your lot. Call at show room. NO AGENTS.

St. Clair, Mich., Dec. 28.—(U.P.)—Garbed in masculine attire but carrying a satchel containing feminine prerequisites, Eva Chrysler, 22, who escaped from the girls' reformatory at Marysville, O., last week, was captured here today.

The girl was boarding an interurban for Detroit when Police Chief Arthur Haynes apprehended her. Haynes said the girl came to St. Clair from Marysville to collect money due her from the St. Clair country club.

Miss Chrysler's escape from Marysville was the second since her commitment from Cleveland last summer. She was convicted of stealing clothing valued at $1,000.

The girl was captured near Marysville a short time after her first escape.

TWENTY

Observation Stations To Test Causes of Radio Fading.

Investigation of "fading" on a scale never before attempted in the United States will be made in mid-January at twenty observation stations, it was announced today by J. K. Smith of the Stewart-Warner corporation.

Hitherto such experiments have been carried on in isolated sections of the country between two or at most three stations. The results of such research have been negligible. There is still no explanation of why signals should be stronger in the winter when static electricity leaps out of one's hair or sparks out of the rug at one's feet, and weak in summer when there are apparently no static charges in the things about us, according to Mr. Smith.

Bandits' Buried "Loot"

Awaits Lucky Finder

About one hundred thousand dollars in gold dust and currency lies buried in a certain Colorado gulch and has been there since 1864. The currency was wrapped in oiled silk and the dust was placed in tin cans. This treasure was interred by Jim and John Reynolds, leaders of a gang of outlaws which terrorized three states during the closing years of the Civil war. By adding murder to highway and stage robbing, they so incensed the citizens of Park county that a posse went forth to exterminate them. It was while in hiding from this posse in Geneva gulch at the junction of Deer and Elk creeks, which flow into the Platte river, that the Reynolds brothers, without informing the other bandits, hid their loot.

The exact spot selected for the cache was an abandoned mine tunnel. A nearby tree was suitably marked, and the brothers fled with their gang. One was killed by the posse, Jim Reynolds and four others were killed in a bunch some weeks later. Finally there was but one left alive, John Reynolds. He was shot while attempting, with Albert Brown, to raid a ranch. Brown carried him to a place of refuge and Reynolds, realizing that he was about to die, told Brown about the buried wealth and how to find it. In addition, he drew a rough map of the locality which has descended through photographed copies to the present day. Having done this, Reynolds being full of bullets, gave up the ghost.

Yet, though men have been searching for this treasure for over half a century, it has not been found. Forest fires have swept the gulch and the old tunnel undoubtedly has caved in, burying within its embrace the loot hidden by Jim and John Reynolds in the brief pause of a flight from a posse.—Josiah M. Ward, in Adventure Magazine.

Rare Gems

Very rare are diamonds of the black and rose-colored varieties. The green diamond is much more common. The "grass green" variety, however, is scarce, but when it does occur is generally of a brilliancy exceeding that of the emerald. The Museum of Natural History at Paris possesses a collection of green-tinted diamonds that is held to be of the finest, but at the museum in Dresden is to be seen the most perfect specimen of this color.

GOOD MANNERS IN
MOTORING HINTEDCommissioner Stoeckel of
Connecticut Has Prepared Code of Ethics.

Robbins B. Stoeckel, commissioner of motor vehicles of the state of Connecticut, has proposed the following code of ethics or good manners in motoring.

"To be a good driver, in the terms of applied ethics, is to be a person of good manners, truly an altruist, ready to see and appreciate the problems of others, to make proper allowance for them and to exercise even a little more patience, care and consideration than is actually called for by the letter of the law.

"Driving an automobile through water or mud so as to splash same on pedestrians is a common pastime with some motorists who have peculiar ideas of what constitutes a joke.

Give Proper Warning.

"Give proper warning to pedestrians and other users of the highway. Even animals should receive reasonable notice.

"The horn should be reserved for safety purpose; not to signal a person inside of a house nor to attract the attention of people passing.

"Give proper attention to headlights. They often cause inconvenience and danger to others.

"Disobeying the instructions received from traffic officers and trying to steal a few feet of space, instead of remaining in a proper spot, not only annoys pedestrians and other motorists but is a dangerous practice.

"Starting an argument with a traffic officer is not only bad etiquette but is causing trouble with the law.

"Keep in the middle of the road" is a tip that has been construed literally by the roadhog. Drivers of heavy vehicles should keep to the right side of the highway where they belong.

Common Offenses.

"A common offense against road etiquette is committed when a motor car operator places his car at a crossing so as to obstruct pedestrian traffic, thus compelling pedestrians to walk around his machine.

"Drivers who wish to be considerate of other people will concentrate on what they are doing, look where they are going, not attempt to gaze at passersby and stay in line.

"The exercise of kindness to others, consideration and true courtesy will prevent any operator from getting a wrong attitude of mind for driving in traffic. Any operator who loses his temper, who becomes sulky, or is abnormal from any one of many different causes is unfit to drive because his automobile provides a medium of expression for his personality. If that personality is upset, he is bound to make trouble for himself or for others, generally for both."

Driving Car Best Way
to Determine Merits

How should an automobilist judge a car today?

"Get behind it and drive it." Is the answer given by a general sales manager of the Oakland Motor Car company.

He sums up the reasons for this answer as follows:

"The public is accustomed to judge an automobile too much today by hearsay. Some of these opinions reflect an old judgment on a car and do not reflect the judgment that would be made on the car if the prospective purchaser actually got behind the car today and judged for himself.

"Automobile shows have been developed for just this purpose to keep the public informed as to the developments of each make of car. Each manufacturer makes changes, additions and improvements in his car—some more, some less. The problem is for the automobilist himself to decide for himself just how much "more automobile" each manufacturer is giving to the public each year.

"This can be decided in but one way—ride in the car. After all, how the car rides is the most important thing. Has it a feel of life, of power? Does it accelerate quickly? Is the mechanism easy to handle? Is the car comfortable to ride in? Will it stand the gaff of rough travel?

"It is the only test of a car today. For after all, a motorist's judgment of a car after he has ridden in it is apt to pretty thoroughly reflect the quality of the car."

WORLD'S SMALLEST AUTO TRAVELS FAR

This little car was designed and built by Gus Petzel of 1207 Grand street, Alameda, Cal., who drove it from San Francisco to New York. The car has a cylinder, air-cooled motor, electric lights, 3 speeds, self-starter, and it weighs 60 pounds. It has a speed of 80 miles per hour and cost about $2,000 to build.

How to Check Up on Gas

When He Fills the Tank

On pumps making one-gallon delivery see that the pump operator makes a full stroke and that the piston travels its full length.

Keep your eyes on the indicator showing the quality of gas being pumped into your tank.

See that the operator drains the delivery hose properly. Many operators have a trick of creating an airlock in the hose which keeps the gasoline from flowing.

Beware of filling stations, where the delivery is outside and the pump inside the building.

Short delivery is frequently caused by leaks in the supply line to the pump. This condition causes the pump to deliver air instead of gasoline. Listen for sputtering sounds.

If the gasoline is low in the supply tank short delivery is likely to result. This can be detected by the irregular flow of gasoline.

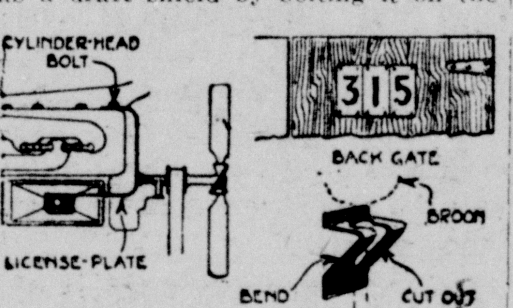

The first delivery by pump after it has been standing idle for some time is invariably short.

View with suspicion a gasoline delivery hose attached to a well in the curb. It is impossible to properly drain such a hose and adequate measure cannot be obtained.

Discover New Uses for
the Old License Plates

Automobile license plates that are renewed annually have some usefulness. The enamel on them makes them rust-resisting and for that reason the numbers can be sheared off in strips, rearranged and placed on the rear gates of city homes as house numbers.

One motorist used a number plate as a draft shield by bolting it on the

Three Uses to Which Old License Plates May Be Applied:

forward side of the intake manifold to prevent the cold draft of the fan from cooling the manifold to the extent of interfering with the carburetion, while another made a holder bracket for the garage broom. Apart from these uses the plates are suitable as patches for holes in the wooden garage floor.

The ingenious motorist will be able to think of many other uses for last year's license plate. The plates are made of pressed steel of a very good quality.

Clutch on Modern Auto
Makes Shifting Easier

One of the most notable advances made by modern cars has been in the direction of easier and more quiet operation. The prevalence of women and even children in their upper teens as drivers of cars is perhaps the best testimonial of the great strides that have been made by automobile engineers along these lines.

Not so many years ago it was necessary to have a good strong arm to crank a car—an ordeal, incidentally, often performed in mud or puddles of water.

Another essential was the possession of a box of matches to light the gas lamps at night. There was also the inconvenience of gear shifting, with the clutch pedal requiring considerable pressure and levers hard to manipulate. In short, driving a car was strictly a man's job.

Electric starters and lights, instrument boards, cord tires and, particularly, easy gear shifting revolutionized things, until today it is not only the usual thing to see a woman at the wheel of a car, but women have become actually as proficient as men in driving automobiles.

Strainer for Cleaning Paint

In cleaning the parts when overhauling the car, the gasoline or kerosene used for the purpose may be of service longer if kept clean. To this end such a strainer or metal grating that will stand up four or six inches in the pail or other receptacle is very advantageous, says Motor Life. When the cleaning liquid is used, sediment is not stirred up, as it strains through into the bottom of the containers. Furthermore, small parts do not get mixed with the sediment and accidentally thrown out.

U. S. FOREST FIRES CAUSE HEAVY LOSS

92,000 Blazes Burn 29,000,000 Acres in Year.

Washington.—Nearly 92,000 forest fires swept 29,000,000 acres of public and private lands during the calendar year 1924, according to a report just compiled by the forest service, United States Department of Agriculture. The actual money damage was $38,000,000, exclusive of damage to young growth, watershed protection, wild life and recreational facilities.

The figures, say forestry officials, clearly reflect the bad forest fire conditions which prevailed last year, especially in many southern states and in California. Compared with the calendar year 1923, the 1924 figures represent an increase of 24,000 fires, and compared with the nine-year average an increase of 45,000 fires, or nearly 100 per cent. In acreage swept by flames, the 1924 figures are only slightly larger than those for 1923, but are almost double the acreage figures representing the nine-year average.

Money damage in 1924, estimated at $38,000,000, is $10,000,000 above the 1923 estimate, and $18,000,000 higher than the nine-year average of $20,000,000. Damage to young growth, watershed protection, wild life, and recreational facilities, and losses to the lumber industry, including wages and other economic values, are not included.

Was a Bad Year.

William B. Greeley, chief of the forest service, states that the material increase in the number of forest fires reported during 1924 is partly the result of more complete reports, although 1924 was a very bad year in many sections of the country.

"Excessively dry weather was experienced in California and in the Gulf states," said Chief Forester Greeley, "and in these states the 1924 fire figures show great increase over the nine-year average. Smaller increases are also shown in most other states."

An analysis of the 1924 statistics shows that incendiary fires top the list with 21,000, or about 23 per cent of the total. Brush burning comes next with 16,000 fires, or 18 per cent, and fires caused by smokers is third with 13,000, or about 14 per cent. Other chief causes of forest fires in 1924 were railroads, camp fires, lumbering and lightning. Lightning is considered the only natural cause of forest fires. Only six per cent of the 1924 fires were started by lightning. Public Opinion a Needed Weapon.

"The greatest single agency with which to combat forest fires," said Colonel Greeley, "is public opinion. No thoughtful citizen can read the 1924 figures without coming to the conclusion that the fight against forest fires is his personal fight. The federal and state governments are doing their utmost with the funds and equipment allotted to them. It is high time that a more effective weapon is placed at their disposal, and that weapon is an outraged public opinion."

The figures given in the forest service report apply to all public and private lands in the United States and not merely to the national forest areas under the jurisdiction of the United States Department of Agriculture. On these latter areas, which embrace 157,000,000 acres, the number of forest fires during 1924 totaled 8,247, the area swept by flames was 602,000 acres and the money damage was estimated at $1,500,000.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

A series of articles by prominent leaders on the Golden Rule as a guide in International Relations.

A GIRDLE ROUND THE WORLD

By BISHOP JAMES CANNON, JR.

The Golden Rule this year will be stretched out to be a golden girdle around the earth.

American memory keenly recalls how Golden Rule Sunday laid hold on the imagination of our own people last December. The plain orphans' dinner was eaten in countless homes, clustering in spirit around the nation's first home, the White House at Washington. And the money response to the Near East Relief was notable also.

But what Americans do not at all realize, is the extent to which the day was observed in Europe. England, Switzerland, France and Germany were especially interested and reacted accordingly to the governing thought of the occasion.

The response this year will be vastly more general in Europe, with about fifty nations cooperating. In the United States popular enthusiasm for the observance grows daily and promises a veritable people's "holy day" of peace spirit and humane sentiment, with immense benevolent value incidentally for the Near East Relief.

The good will among nations cultivated by international charity has been frequently illustrated and vindicated since the great war ended. Famine relief in Russia and Central Europe, enormous subscriptions for China famine and Japanese earthquake—who can measure their influence?

But these considerations chiefly apply to friendliness generated in the hearts of recipients toward the givers of charity. It is to the credit of the Near East Relief, specializing in the care and protection of orphans who survived massacres in Bible Lands, that it has developed a cooperation still more dynamic—the good will that must knit together nations who are cooperating in the same work of kindness, an international partnership in giving for the poor.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

The GOLDEN RULE in PRACTICE

BEST EXPRESSION OF FRIENDSHIP

By CALVIN COOLIDGE

The reports of the observance of International Golden Rule Sunday last year in fifty countries, and its far-reaching results in training orphans in the Near East, have been of great interest to me. This expression of brotherhood inevitably has a beneficial influence upon those who give as well as those who receive.

As practical help is the best expression of friendship, I feel that the aid which America may give out of its prosperity to those impoverished by war may be of the utmost value in the promotion of international good will. The consistent observance of Golden Rule Sunday cannot but help to bring about the application of the Golden Rule to the misunderstandings of nations and individuals. I earnestly hope that the voluntary observance of this day may become increasingly prevalent in the homes of America and throughout the world.

That rule of ethical guidance which we designate as the Golden Rule is common to all great systems of religion and to the entire philosophy of human relationship.

It is a rule worthy of all acceptance, and to be translated into the terms of relationships among communities and peoples, among races and nations. Those among us who are required to give consideration to the difficult and complicated relations between the great communities of the world; those whose concern is for the maintenance of peace, of mutual helpfulness and generous cooperation among the nations, will do well to keep always in the front of our thoughts this simple precept.

America is ready today, as always, to do its full share. It wants the peace of good will and of the Golden Rule; not the peace of force imposed by those who have power. It does not want peace as an interlude of brightness here and there in a world still addicted to war. It wants peace as the normal, the assured estate in a world from which a wiser generation shall have forever outlawed aggressive war.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

NO WORK MORE WORTHY

By FELIX WARBURG

It has been my great privilege to see something of the Near East Relief work abroad. My outstanding impression has been the efficiency of the Americans who are in charge. Of all the charitable and humanitarian work abroad during and since the war I am sure this is easily the leader in the quality of its personnel. Their own modesty prevents them from saying what they are and from singing their own praises. So I may say for them that they are worthy of being entrusted with our funds.

I have seen in Athens the beauty of the Acropolis and the horrors of the refugee camps. I have seen the Royal Theatre with its horde of refugees. I have seen also the patient workers, who are willing to live in a mud village which 10,000 refugees have built for themselves right in the center of Athens. Mud is the floor, mud is the wall, and muddy are the garments of dwellers in this pathetic refugee town.

To live under these conditions, with sickness and indescribable misery, takes a spirit of devotion that you can find only in the Near East. These Americans who have done this work for us deserve our heartiest applause. You can find their like only in the Near East.

They have stayed at their posts through some desperate times, in Greece, in Syria, in Turkey, in Armenia and Persia. I have seen them in Palestine as well as in Athens and Constantinople, and all I can say is this: Cooperate with them and trust them with all you can.

The work for the orphaned children needs a special word. The children in the American orphanages are thriving in a most extraordinary way. Their training is leading them forward inevitably into a place where they will be the leaders of their people.

Golden Rule Sunday will be observed throughout the United States in December, on behalf of the Near East Relief. This series of articles, by prominent public men who are supporters and spokesmen for this great philanthropy, is designed to call public attention to the background and purpose of the work and its need for general support.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Evaline Elizabeth Morris was born near Bremen, Ohio, September 7, 1848, the daughter of Thomas Neeley and Nancy Valentine Neeley.

She was the eldest child of the family of six; one sister, Laura Shusimple. It was created for entertainment purposes only. And since Baker have preceded her in death. She is survived by three brothers; John Baker, of Cortland, Ohio, and Joseph Baker and Amos Baker, of Lancaster.

On April 5, 1870, she was married to James M. Morris, of Circleville. One son, Ira Walter Morris, was drowned in early youth. Three sons and two daughters survive her; Hatfield Ellen Morris, of Toledo; John W. Morris, of Carroll; C. M. Morris, of Miami, Florida; A. R. Morris, of Ann Arbor, Michigan, and Inez L. Fissell, of Columbus.

Mrs. Morris lived for forty-three years on the farm in Bloom township where the family home is still kept. For twelve years she had shared her home with her cousin, Sidney Hilyard who has been her lifelong friend and her constant attendant in the years of her failing strength.

Mrs. Morris had always been known for a kindness of interest in her circle of friends and for a steadfast loyalty to the social, moral and ethical standards of her youth. She came of the stock of the pioneers and was herself one of the sturdiest of the line. She was a member of the United Brethren church from her youth. After establishing the home in Bloom township, she was a member of the Zion Reformed church known as the Betzar church until the organization was dissolved four years ago. She was laid to rest at the Betzar church graveyard beside her husband, James Madison Morris, with whom she lived happily for forty-seven years.

Burglar Was Ladylike

Nettie Gawler, who had the unenviable reputation of being the only woman burglar in Kansas City, made burgling quite a profitable business—until she was caught. One night she stole some clothes from the residence of Mrs. Fannie Farr of that city. Some time after the clothes were stolen Mrs. Farr was visiting at the home of her mother when a woman called at the house and tried to sell her some clothing. "This dress will just fit you," she said. "The bust and waist measurements are just right. You are just the proper height to wear them nicely."

"What kind of a dress is it?" inquired Mrs. Farr, all at once becoming interested.

"It's a taffeta silk with a lace collar and insertion of narrow Val—" began the woman, when Mrs. Farr seized her by the arm, interrupting her.

"I'll take it," she said. "Let's go and see it at once."

As the two were going toward the house where the dress was alleged to be stored they met a policeman and Mrs. Farr asked him to arrest her companion. The woman was taken into custody, the house was searched and the stolen goods were recovered.

Family of Naval Heroes

It is a sixteen-year-old naval cadet who has just succeeded to the baronetcy of his father, Admiral Sir Michael Culme-Seymour, who in the great war commanded the battleship Centurion at Jutland, afterward directed as rear admiral of the British forces in the Black sea, helping the Russian empress mother and the members of her family to escape from the Crimea, and who from 1923 to 1924 was commander in chief of the British naval forces in north Atlantic and west Indian waters.

That young Sir Michael Culme-Seymour should belong to the naval profession is in keeping with the traditions of his ancient family and serves to recall the fact that the name of Seymour has figured without a single break on the roster of the officers of the British fleet ever since the reign of Henry VIII, that is to say, prior to the discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. Sir Thomas Seymour was the lord high admiral of the blue-beard monarch. And another Seymour was the vice admiral of that fleet which defeated the Spanish armada.—Family Herald.

Finding New Power

Although their progress is slow and unspectacular, scientists are making dogged attempts to discover a way to make artificial fuels which will replace the diminishing supplies of coal and oil. The process they seek to perform in their laboratories, according to Popular Mechanics Magazine, is the marvelous one that nature uses every day in storing up energy in leaves and plants by converting waste material into wood, etc., under the action of sunlight. Solution of the riddle is being sought in California by Dr. Herman A. Spoehr and a staff of research workers. A year's consumption of coal at the present time represents the accumulation of 100 years, he says.

Turin's Auto Trade

Turin, the Detroit of Italy's automobile world, sends nearly three-fourths of its cars to other countries.

AMUSEMENTS

Comedy and laughter reign supreme at the Metropolitan theater for James Cruze's latest Paramount production, "Marry Me!" is being shown at that theater to appreciative audiences.

"Marry Me!" is a comedy pure and simple. It was created for entertainment purposes only. And since heart interest is the basis of all good comedy, Cruze has with profound understanding and skill injected into it all those intimately human touches that lift the picture out of the make-believe into the real!

Originality in movie plots is rather rare and for that reason alone this photoplay deserves a blue ribbon award. Imagine a pretty small town school teacher waiting five years for her fiancé, John Smith. Picture her excitement when she receives a telegram one day saying that he is coming. And then consider her humiliation and embarrassment when John Smith arrives, not with a wedding ring but with a cold storage egg! Of course, it's another John Smith—and that's where the fun begins!

Cruze is in a class by himself when it comes to extracting the maximum in "Marry Me!" He hasn't overlooked a single opportunity. The motif and characters get right under your skin, and you worry with them and exult with them as the humor and pathos is projected on the screen.

As in all Cruze productions, the acting is everything that it should be. Florence Vidor is perfectly cast as the sweet, appealing heroine; Edward Everett Horton gives a decidedly convincing performance as the pure food crusader; and Helen Jerome Eddy and John Roche are admirably effective in their respective roles.

"Marry Me!" is the type of cheerful entertainment that is good for anything that ails you!

JUDGES ARE BLAMED FOR CRIME WAVE

Daily Interview With Big Men—
Today's Interview With John
Barton Payne, President
of American Red Cross.

(U. P. C. News Service Inc.)

"Our criminal law is all right. It is quite capable of dealing with the criminals. There are of course minor defects here and there, but basically the system is sound. But there is much difference between law and law enforcement. We need commanding personalities on the bench and competent juries in the box. If our judges were able, fearless, intelligent as well as just and considerate, there would be very little discussion of changing the laws.

"If our criminal law is to be criticized it is on the ground of lack of expedition of trial. The shorter the time between arrest and trial the more effectively the criminal is deterred from crime. A judge with a commanding personality can put the machinery of justice on a higher plane. He can cut off long winded speeches and reduce reliance on technical delays. Prolonged trials give the law a bad reputation and cause people to believe that there is something wrong with the law when in fact the fault is with those who administer it.

"Our theory that all men are innocent until proved guilty is worked to such an extreme by weak, sympathetic or incompetent judges that chances of conviction have grown relatively small. We are too sentimental. Our sentimentality is not only defeating justice but is definitely encouraging the criminal. Our prisons are effected by this sentimentality. A distinction must be made between those who commit crimes under the dominion of passion and the professional criminal. The latter constitute a class at war with society. The cases where they are reformed are extremely rare. They should accordingly be treated as criminals and not as pampered guests of the state."

JUSTICE IN ENGLAND

In England the rights of a citizen are scrupulously respected. Such conduct as that of some American police officials and judges, who at their own whim violate the constitutional rights of individuals, would raise a hurricane of protest in England.

The other day there was an illuminating example of British justice. An ex-convict named Trevor was wanted for a few petty swindles. Another citizen was arrested on suspicion that he was Trevor. He was held overnight in a police station without being allowed to call a lawyer.

This case raised a storm. The blood of the British public boiled at the indignity. The newspapers thundered. The British office of home affairs, a cabinet department, began an inquiry to fix the blame and impose punishment. Only one citizen had been injured, but he was the symbol of the British nation. There was more honest indignation in his behalf than there is here in behalf of an American citizen murdered in his home.—Chicago Journal of Commerce.

Japanese Like Films

That the Japanese are as enthusiastic about moving pictures and movie stars as are the film fans in America was recently evidenced by a prize contest for the most popular Japanese cinema player. The contest was conducted by the Miyako Shimbun of Tokyo, one of the leading amusement newspapers of the capital, and the winner, Miss Nobuko Satsuki, received 1,313,553 votes. Both male and female players were eligible. Miss Satsuki is noted for her "vamp" roles.

Wintering Calf on Grain Too Costly

Gains Do Not Justify the Additional Expense.

In wintering calves the use of grain in the ration increases the cost of wintering materially and does not sufficiently increase the total gains at the time or subsequently to justify the additional expense, says the United States Department of Agriculture. This conclusion was reached from the results of a series of experiments carried on by the department in co-operation with the West Virginia experiment station in which grade Short-horn, Hereford, and Aberdeen calves were used to determine the effect of different winter rations on gains the following summer.

One lot of calves receiving a ration of mixed hay and a grain mixture of 3 parts corn, 1 part bran, and 1 part linseed meal made a winter gain of 98 pounds each, which was more than twice as much as another lot which was fed corn silage and clover hay. The latter drove, however, made a greater gain the following summer on pasture and lacked only 42 pounds of reaching the same total as the grain-fed calves. The cost of the grain ration through the winter did not justify the extra gains, says the department.

In fact, the experiment was carried until the calves were three years old, in which time the advantage in weight due to grain feeding the first winter was practically all lost by the time they were three years old.

Soiling Crops or Corn Silage as Supplements

Soiling crops or corn silage are recommended as supplements for drought damaged pastures used for dairy herds. If the dairyman lacks corn silage and is not in position to feed a soiling crop, he should give his cow a grain ration, says O. G. Schaefer of the dairy division, University farm, St. Paul, Minn. For average or low producing cows on pastures badly burned the grain ration should consist of equal parts of corn and oats or equal parts of barley and oats. For cows of more than average production one pound of all meal should be added to the ration for every five or six pounds of the corn and oats or barley and oats. Where no pasture is left at all the cows should be fed about as in winter.

Save Farm Machinery by Covering and Painting

Now is the time of year to get all the farm machinery under cover and painted.

If the metal is covered with paint, it will not rust. Rust destroys thousands of dollars' worth of farm machinery each year. Not even a wealthy farmer can afford to neglect his machines.

Grease and rust that has accumulated should first be removed. The rust may be removed by means of sandpaper, or a strong steel brush. Grease may be removed with soft, warm water.

A coat of paint over anything is the same as a covering, and protects what it covers from the elements. It is economy to paint.

Keep Late Spring Pigs on Good Growing Ration

Late spring pig litters should be kept on a good growing ration well supplied with either skim milk or tankage. If there is any indication of cheaper corn this fall these late spring pigs might be carried along for growth on a limited corn and tankage ration while on good pasture. Until good pasture does arrive a liberal supply of tankage or skim milk and grain should be provided.

Little is gained by keeping a pig down to half efficiency by a limited ration. Young pigs become stunted on pasture alone. At least two pounds of grain daily on good pasture for 100 pounds of live weight are required for best results.

FARM NOTES

Early plowed kaffir stubble makes good oat ground.

Clean hens in clean quarters make for poultry profits.

Fifty ears of corn should be gathered for every acre to be planted next year.

Poison bran mash is an indispensable item on the last banquet menu for grasshoppers.

Corn selected for seed should be stored at once in a dry, well-ventilated place where it will cure quickly and remain dry.

Roughly, soy straw may be regarded as about two-thirds as valuable as clover hay, but this is not an exact figure by any means.

Legumes take from 50 to 100 pounds of nitrogen to the acre from the air annually. An amount sufficient for a 50-bushel corn crop. Seed some alfalfa this fall.

Oats is a good grain to feed colts, but when not available a grain ration consisting of six parts corn, three parts bran, and one part linseed oil meal, is a splendid substitute.

WASHINGTON SOCIETY WOMEN

Foremost Long Skirts Campaign Started In Capital City.

Washington, Dec. 28.—(UP.)—The young debs of the capital flipped their cigarette ashes disdainfully today at the social campaign undertaken here for return of long skirts and dainty non-smoking, covered-knee women of Victorian days.

Their eye brows arched in cool surprise as Mrs. John B. Henderson, social arbiter of embassy row, with the backing of the blue blooded daughters of the American Revolution, the National Congress of parents and teachers and the national federation of women's clubs, led the assault upon knee length gowns and cigarettes—which have been accepted here longer than anywhere else in the nation as established institutions.

Miss Elizabeth Hume, debutante, said the campaign was "bunk."

"Smoking is the least of the vulgarities of the present day," she said.

Miss Anne Graham, another bud commented:

"If American womanhood did nothing worse than smoke and wear short dresses life would be perfect."

Most of the debutantes said they smoked and several criticized severely the fashions of fifty years ago, as unhealthy, clumsy and troublesome.

Mrs. Henderson assailed short gowns as a "vulgar imitation of the Paris underworld" and cigarettes smoked by women as "inevitably leading sooner or later to physical bankruptcy and race degeneracy."

STATE TEACHERS'

Association Re-elects President McDowell.

Columbus, Dec. 29.—(UP.)—J. A. McDowell, superintendent of schools in Ashland, O., was re-elected president of the Ohio State Teachers' Association, in convention here today. McDowell, who has held his present position for 18 years and has served two terms as a member of congress, was unopposed for election.

The long-heralded fight for "more men teachers" and "to make the teaching profession more attractive to men," was launched here today as steps were taken to organize the Ohio Schoolmasters' Club.

Untrained Monkey That Shows Good Manners

What is a monkey really like? That is, when he is brought up without any training of furbelows whatever, when he is left entirely uninfluenced to follow his own sweet way and is not even given monkey companions from which he can learn, what is proper for monkeys to do? That is the question Professor Pfungst, a member of the Berlin Physiological society, wanted to get some light on in a study he made on a monkey brought up just like that.

As an infant, the monkey was raised on human milk with some mixture of cow's milk, for the monkey brand was unavailable. His face was so light at birth that it was easy to mistake him for a human infant when in his nurse's arms. On the third day of his adopted life he began to suck his thumb and has not gotten over the habit yet in his fourth year of life. Thumb-sucking has never been observed in other monkeys, Professor Pfungst says.

The little fellow knew good manners from birth. He could not bear being shouted at and he always turned his head and ignored the offender. It was just as bad when anyone stared at him; in fact, sometimes he was so upset by it that he showed he would rather be dead than go through with it, for he often lay flat on the ground and pretended he was. Anything that resembled big scary eyes frightened him. The sight of a man's head did not alarm him in the least, but a gorilla's head aroused great fear.

The monkey - ed, not when he was bored or tired, but when he was angry. He was serious and never laughed, although his mother before him had. He could not cry, and even onions held before his eyes failed to evoke tears.

In four years he had seen practically no other creatures except man. On two occasions he had been shown a cat, and then himself in a looking-glass. Then came his introduction to one of his own kind. At first he was very excited and afraid, but his courage eventually returned, and before long he became trustful.

CITIES OF FUTURE TO BE BIG TRADE CENTERS

People Will Live in Widely Scattered Suburbs.

Chicago.—Cities of the future will be made up of a central area, devoted to business and night life, and widely scattered suburbs in which all the married people will live.

That is the conclusion of D. R. McKenzie, exchange professor of sociology from the University of Washington to the University of Chicago.

In outlining his study of ecology, or the forces that distribute population, Professor McKenzie asserted it's all a question of transportation.

"The first type of city," he added, "demanded that its inhabitants walk to the center for business and the pursuit of pleasure. That type tended to be circular and family life was distributed in all parts. Then, with the rudimentary street car lines, came the star-shaped city.

"As industry developed and cross transportation lines came into being, there also developed clusters of city life, with a new center at each crossing. Gradually subways and elevated lines brought a network of urban life scattered all over the city."

"With autos," he said, "the population may live anywhere within fifty or seventy-five miles from the downtown, highly specialized shopping area."

Professor McKenzie added that it was possible to predict, with fair accuracy, how long a slum will remain a slum and to what extent the gold coasts of today will remain fashionable.

Slants on Life

By J. A. WALDRON

Contrasting Contacts

TRADITION advises that a scarcity of men may always be expected at summer hotels. And feminine experience must verify tradition, for who does not know that women at leisure find flirtation a vocation?

But wherever men are lacking and women are idle and must fall back upon their sex, they are impelled to form friendships with one another, or at least to get together in association that passes for friendship. And sometimes friendships formed by women in strange places survive social and other differences that would be fatal at home.

At the Hotel Delmar the breakfast hour on a certain sultry morning disclosed some twosome women with but three or four men. Some of the women were dressed for tennis, others for golf, several for other outdoor exercise, and but few had that purposeless aspect that sheer laziness gives.

One very pretty young woman, upon whom the eyes of others in her vicinity turned with admiration or envy, according to the ages of the gazers, for her sartorial style supplemented nature's endowment, was oblivious to all about her. As she daintily negotiated her breakfast she apparently found joy in a letter which she read and read again. And as she rose from the table she held the letter open as though it had not exhausted her interest, strolled out upon a piazza and settled comfortably in a chair.

Another woman, older but still attractive and elegant in dress, had regarded the young woman with a peculiar interest, and, following her, took a chair near enough to indulge her impulse to become acquainted.

They fell into conversation without knowing anything whatever of each other. But in such circumstances names mean nothing, and formality is ignored.

"I suppose you are alone, as I am," said the elder woman with a smile.

"For the moment, yes. I expect some one this afternoon."

"I had hoped," said the elder with a sigh, "that we might get acquainted."

"I Suppose You Are Alone, as I am?"

and perhaps be companionable. I know no one here, and one so seldom finds congeniality!"

"We can be friends just the same," said the younger. "The one I expect is to remain but a day or so. He will return later. I am to be married soon," she added, blushing.

"Ah! It is strange I am so impressed by you! And as you have confided a secret—I suppose it is a secret—I shall tell you something of myself." They drew their chairs closer. "I am here to forget—or try to forget—an unhappy episode in my life."

"I suppose we must all have unhappiness some time. Fortunately I have escaped it, and shall not anticipate it."

"There may be persons who never know it. I hope it may pass you by."

"You are still young, and I think you are of a buoyant spirit," said the younger woman with an approving glance. "What episode in life can prevail over the will to seek happiness?"

"True as to some things. But with the affections and a life that has seemed settled yet is broken it is different."

"You have been disappointed in love?" The tone was one of pity.

"Yes. Or in marriage. Sometimes it means the same thing. Sometimes love and marriage have no intimate relation. You feel for me. That proves you are in love."

"Ah!" The younger woman's expression was an eloquent affirmative.

"Then listen. When you are married, cherish the love of the man who loves you. Never be careless of it. Some women do not realize upon their opportunities. I may have been careless. I may have thought that what seemed settled would never be disturbed. My husband drifted away from me. I may have assumed too much. But I could not stand rivalry. I divorced him, and he never moved to defend himself. Surely that was a confession!"

The younger woman was disturbed, but her will to friendship was not affected. She took the other's hand. "No woman who loves a man can excuse rivalry," she said. Then she gave a little cry, and rose. "He has come on an earlier train, as I felt sure he would!" And with a happy flutter she started to meet a well-groomed man of about forty who with quick, nervous steps entered the piazza with a searching glance.

The smile as he approached left him when he recognized the elder woman, who crumpled in her chair in a faint.
